First, width depends on your Joomla-template.
Second, disable showing modules on FP-page, so it will be displayed fullwidth of your template.

Menu>New>Component-Link. Fill out information. Select "New Window With/Without Browser Navigation". See if that works.

You need to go in the backend of the site under the module manager and select each of the modules which are showing up on your template when you viewing your forum and make their view options to not include when the forum link is being used.

You may have issues with your template as some templates don't allow different modules to be hidden at all (most often the 'left' position). In that case you'll have to edit your template to make the problem positions optional.

Posted by Lordnet - 2007/10/05 09:08

i edited all the left modules

but stills using the same width.

New Window With/Without Browser Navigation
i dont want a new window (this maintains the left menus) (means, the same result of the picture but in a popup window) argg i must edit the template??

the right question are:
how i load a full width fireboard???
which joomla templates are full width compatible???

Possibly

how i load a full width fireboard???

It looks like you've got your modules showing up correctly (as in not at all). It means the template you are using doesn't collapse the left column at all.

which joomla templates are full width compatible???

By the looks of it none of the default ones are. There are ones at the various template clubs which do have removable left columns. Otherwise it's usually very easy to edit the template to get rid of the left column.

search for one of aha-68 ... his templates have good coded modules and they will be removed after disabling modules at this position...

I don't know if you ever found a solution but this worked for me when I had exactly the same problem -

I cant find in my template's index.php.

Any help?

I just removed right column. And it doesn't look nice.

Pretty much the same as solarflare with different graphics. Find a better template. Those are difficult to modify.

I like it. It suits to my content.

So there's no way to fix it?

I'm really sorry to tell you but that template you're using is based on one that is very badly configured. There will be A LOT of work needing to be done to make that work. I hope someone has the time to do it.

I am sorry, but maybe i am a bit slow, because I can not figure out how to get this going for the life of me. I am at the point where I would pay someone to help me out with this!!!! I have been working on this for weeks now without success.

My site is <http://www.crimsonreavers.com> is there a way to setup joomla to just run the fireboard in particular in a different template, for example solarflare, so that i can do the things previously listed to get fullscreen fb ?

the template itself is too complicating for me to configure, so if there is a way to have joomla just change templates when a menu component link is clicked on JUST FOR THAT PARTICULAR link, that should fix my problem

ALSO, is there no way to just run fireboard in its own window without the joomla template even present?

I dont need ANY of my joomla template items to show up, whatsoever... i just want the forum solo fullscreen

if anyone can help me out, i will be forever indebted to you.

Sincerely,
justin

You can try what I suggest at the end of this thread.

Re:How to have a fullscreen fb ?

OK that should help making a new blank template, so my next question would be: how do i get fireboard (a joomla component) to open in a new window WITH A SERPATE template than the default....

As in, when you click the link to FB forums, it will open a new window using a template that is not used in the main page... i would need to assign FB to change templates but only for FB

Re:How to have a fullscreen fb ?

Posted by grumblemarc - 2007/11/11 23:11

Assign it (the blank template) to Fireboard in Joomla.

Re:How to have a fullscreen fb ?

Posted by justingordon - 2007/11/11 23:16

you have been so helpful this seems like this will work for me... I appreciate all your correspondence.. Would it be possible to help a feeble minded person (me) with a step-by-step of how to "Assign it (the blank template) to Fireboard in Joomla" like a menu -> location -> location type thing?

Re:How to have a fullscreen fb ?

Posted by grumblemarc - 2007/11/11 23:27

Site>Template Manager>Site Templates>Put a tickmark in the blank template>Click Assign>Highlight the forum menu item>Click Save.

There will also be the good chance that when it opens with the blank template many CSS items will need to be defined in Fireboards forum.css file.

Re:How to have a fullscreen fb ?

Posted by justingordon - 2007/11/11 23:42

OK So that worked, somewhat. Now if you go to:
http://crimsonreavers.com/home/index.php?option=com_fireboard&Itemid=56 for example, and click under the RECENT POSTS section on the 'test' post, you can see that it then pops up with the forum post in the front-page template...

keep in mind i assigned the forum to solar flare, which should be ok for right now.

If you're talking about reverting to the default template please check the link at the bottom of the post I referred you to. It has a proposed fix to prevent that.

OK, Well the problem now after applying hte patches is that When you Post a new thread, it automatically redirects back with the default old template.

Is there a way to turn off automatic redirect so people can just click "" instead of it automatically redirecting?

Simple solution, Create or have a template with a full screen size.
And disable your modules left and right.

I have read through the sticky but it didnt help me. I want to make the main menu on the left go away and the forums be almost full screen but with the top menu still there. Can anyone help? Heres my site forums:
<http://tngaming.net/index.php/Forums/>

Heres the same Joomla template and what I am looking for, just different Fireboard theme:

I think he said it. You can even create a template WITHOUT left or right modules and assign Fireboard to it exclusively.

I dont know how to do that. I unpublished all the menus on the left to see if it went fullscreen and it did but, the forum doesnt look right, no tables, and the top links on the forum are still scrunched.

Re:How to have a fullscreen fb ?

On this part of your template index:

->

#td align="left" style="width:1%;padding-left:4px;##img id="BoxSwitch_topprofilebox__topprofilebox_tbody" class="hideshow" src="http://tngaming.net/components/com_fireboard/template/dark_blue/images/english/shrink.gif" alt="" /##td
```

->

Try to hack that part, include it within your left modules if statement using this:

```
if(mosCountModules('left').....etc

Do that part exclusively for fireboard that's what I mean.

In my fireboard index files, they all say that they are fake basicaly. I dont get it :(This is harder than I thought for Joomla.

Fake? :fbconfu: Do not try to edit the HTML files. They are just a security measure. You need to start altering PHP files.

If I were you I'd copy your template to make a new one, which would have the beginning you want, and then only mosLoadMain tag (or similar, can't remember now) and assign it to the fireboard menu item link...

PM me so I can help you w/ that

I'm not sure if this'll be of use to anyone, but to create a full width fb forum I simply added some css for #left in the fb template css. This could be done for any other positions you wanted to clear for the forum to display as you want:

```
#left {
visibility:hidden;
width:0px;
height:0px;
position:absolute;
top:-1000;
left:-1000;
}
```

Hi

I am using FB 1.0.4 with Dorona Brown 1.0.1.

This morning I moved the site from Joomla 1.0.13 to 1.5.3.

The forum works well after the migration but not all the pages are full width. For example the main forum page is fine, but click on a category and you get a narrower FB template. Choose a thread and it pings back to 100% width.

Any help gratefully appreciated.
