
Things to consider before 1.0.3 release...

Posted by palebluedot - 2007/09/04 21:34

As everyone knows, 1.0.3 is just around the corner. Here are some suggestions before you get ready to take the dive.

Backup your system. All of it. (You're doing that on a regular basis anyway, right? ;))

Notify your members of possible downtime. You never know what problems to expect.

Setup a local sever for testing such as JSAS (<http://jsas.joomlasolutions.com/>) or a LAMP install (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/LAMP_\(software_bundle\))) Install configure it with your current site and database. Then you can do a dry test run without running the risk of messing up your live site.

Did I mention backup? :D

Feel free to add your own.

UPDATE: I created a flash demo to show you how to install JSAS on Windows.

Yup! Always backup before you install!

Re: Things to consider before 1.0.3 release...

Posted by bardani - 2007/09/05 06:15

...Then back up AGAIN after the install.

You never know when you might wish you had that one backup that would save you a lot of headaches. :ohmy:

So, again, back up! Both the SQL and the file structure!

Also, read the upgrade instructions before you get started. Know what to expect. I've seen many people try to "wing it" on software issues then get totally lost for no logical reason other than not having read the manual.

Will 1.0.3 load appropriately as an upgrade to JoomlaBoard for the SQL database structure?

I second that question, Is 1.0.3 due for release today or has this site been hacked and what we see is with respect to version 1.0.3 being released ON the 5th is merely someones idea of fun.

Its end of business hours now GMT, one would assume that when you say something will be available on a particular date, it usually means its ready when that date begins not when it ends.

I found it slightly worrying that there is no release available as yet and I cant help but assume there are still problems/bugs preventing the release from appearing and that the developers may now be rushing to get it out..

It would have been much more professional to say it will be ready on the 6th/7th or whenever and have it ready for start of business on that date with total confidence.

Ahhh, come on guys! As we all know, a STABLE release is never 100% STABLE.

So, just wait some hours, check out the new component (for FREE - as we all know) and post your suggestions after that...

Kind regards from Switzerland

Yep i will check it , and i want to say thanks for free components .

But it's very irresponsible that I wait today all day for 1.0.3 version.

If there are some problems , i think that they have at least to say on forum that stable version will be pospone for end of the day or couple of days more .

Thanks for the update - and apologies for the flack that some folk are giving you. Some of us appreciate that you are doing this voluntarily. We also appreciate that the more time you spend dealing with the "where is it" type of post, the more you are diverted away from the real task.
