
Unable To See Text

Posted by Artos - 2007/10/15 18:26

Hey,

I've been ripping my hair out for the past 2 days trying to get this to work!
I've edited and re-uploaded the css file several times.

My problem is as follows:

- The text that displays how many topics and replies are in a category is the same colour as the background.
- The announcement box text is the same colour as the background.
- The forum legend at the bottom is the same colour as the background.
- The my profile page text is the same colour as the background.

Now I know what your thinking, Straight off css problem. I've changed every single #colour code (#FFFFFF, #FAFAFA, #FBFBFB, etc..)

Heres some examples:

I gladly appreciate the help,
Cheers

the text is just white right? have you tried editing your template's css? make sure you are forcing fireboard to use the template's css instead of joomla's css.

Do you have the correct Dorona Brown template installed? Make sure it's compatible for you version of FB. If you're running FB 1.0.3 running 1.0.0 or 1.0.1 templates won't work. Otherwise you will have to edit the forum.css file like wasabi mentions. Any CSS not defined by FB will default to Joomla's CSS. Check the stickys in "FireBoard Graphics and Templates" for compatible templates and template tutorials.

I couldn't solve the problem, but ye were right, it was using joomla's css file. I did a fresh clean install (just incase :P) and now im using grumblemarc's infinity template (It rocks!)

Thanks for your help guys,
Regards,
Artos

Hi all, I've read a lot of the css posts on these boards. This exact thread is what's going on with my site. The images up there are identical to my dilemma. I did what grumblemarc suggested and got the new version of dorona brown, installed it over the old one, however, nothing changed at all. Can someone please help me out?
